BLDM Staff Dedicated to Helping Rebuild Puerto Rico after Hurricane Maria

The staff of BLDM in San Juan, Puerto Rico, is dedicated to helping rebuild the island nation after it was devastated by Hurricane Maria on September 20, 2017.

In a short video, the staff from BLDM thanked everyone in Puerto Rico for their dedication to helping rebuild the devastated island.

“We thought everything was lost,” the company said in the video. “We thought that getting up would be almost impossible. But we decided to bet on ourselves and change the course.”

When Hurricane Maria made landfall in September, it brought 155 mph winds, it left much of the island without water or power. The Category 4 storm was the strongest to hit Puerto Rico in 85 years. Currently, electrical service has been restored for about 68 percent of the island’s residents, though 450,000 residents still do not have power since the storm hit, according to an article on CNN.com.

BLDM has been a Linc Service contractor since 2011.

In the video, BLDM showed its staff working to restore power lines, and said the company would remain dedicated to helping restore traffic lights, telecommunications and fiber optics services, along with electrical services.

“We want a new Puerto Rico, because we can get up again,” the company said in the video.
